

The FCC is mandated to keep the public airwaves available to serve public needs. I believe the weaker rules on ownership introduced in 1996 have proven that this sort of deregulation does not serve the public, but only large corporations like Clear Channel. It is wrong to now weaken the rules that apply to television. This Docket is not in the best interest of the general public and represents an abdication of responsibility by the FCC. More public comment time should be allowed on this very important issue.
